Chapter 3. Vertebrate Species of Greatest Conservation Need: Assessments and Conservation Strategies

This chapter provides information on Wisconsin's Vertebrate Species of Greatest Conservation Need (Section 3.1) and the Ecological Landscapes (Section 3.2) and Natural Communities (Section 3.3) that they rely on.

3.1 Vertebrate Species of Greatest Conservation Need

Of the 556 wildlife species native to Wisconsin, 152 (27%) have been identified as Species of Greatest Conservation Need. Fourty-nine of these are currently listed as Threatened or Endangered at the state and/or federal level. Species of Greatest Conservation Need are divided into three groups based on their relative abundance in Wisconsin in comparison with the rest of their range. These divisions address the global role Wisconsin plays in the conservation of these species but leave options open for management.
